Course Description

English 10 course modules expand your existing knowledge and skill, challenging you to use what you know with greater sophistication and precision. All elements of the redesigned English Language Arts program are built on two foundations:

Big Ideas – concepts that students will understand by the end of their studies

Core Competencies – skills that students will use throughout their lives.

The B.C. Ministry and Yukon Education have identified three Core Competencies

(<https://curriculum.gov.bc.ca/competencies>) that students will develop through the process of their education. These Core Competencies are Communication, Thinking (both Creative and Critical thinking), and Personal and Social (encompassing Positive Personal & Cultural Identity, Personal Awareness & Responsibility, and Social Responsibility).

There are five Big Ideas that drive the curriculum skills and materials in the English Language Arts program.

Language and text can be a source of creativity and joy.	Exploring stories and other texts helps us understand ourselves and make connections to others and to the world.	People understand text differently depending on their worldviews and perspectives.	Texts are socially, culturally, and historically constructed.	Questioning what we hear, read, and view contributes to our ability to be educated and engaged citizens .	Language shapes ideas and influences others.	Vocal communication is powerful and evocative .

Course Goals

The goals of the course are broken down further – into Curricular Competencies (things students will need to be able to do) and Content (information that students will need to know).

The Course Competencies – the goals for what students will be able to do at the end of the course of study - are divided into two categories:

1. Comprehend and Connect = reading, listening and viewing texts and media, focus on being a savvy consumer of communication texts.
2. Create and Communicate = writing, speaking and representing ideas and information, focus on being an effective producer of communication texts.

Course Structure

The course may be a new format to students in several ways. There will be a focus on using inquiry questions in learning, and in having students co-create questions, criteria for assessments, and criteria for classroom expectations.

The course will require significant involvement on the part of the students.

The course will be focused around a theme, which will guide our process of developing inquiry questions, analyzing texts, producing texts, and working together as a classroom learning community.

The theme for this course relates to The Power of Words.

To explore this theme and to develop and practice our questioning and communication skills, we will watch/read/look at and create (with an emphasis on written and oral presentation or communication):

- short stories, ➤ songs, ➤ images, ➤ novels, ➤ multimedia texts, ➤ presentations/talks
- poems, ➤ video and films, ➤ and scripts.

Assessment & Evaluation

Assessment: happens prior to and during the learning process. Teachers and students use the results and the feedback to improve ongoing work and achievement. This includes regular peer and self-assessment.

Evaluation: happens late in the learning process, to determine whether or not the student has successfully achieved mastery of a skill or has truly learned information.

Reporting: formal and informal reports communicate to students and their families the results of assessment and/or evaluation.

Assessment, evaluations and formal reporting are focused on descriptive feedback. Assessment activities will include but will not be limited to: reading out loud, formal written work, class discussions, quizzes, tests and exams, classroom activities, group work, practice work, performances and presentation.

Assessment will be completed using a variety of tools, including but not limited to: scales, rubrics, checklists and other formats using clearly communicated criteria that students know prior to being assessed or evaluated.

Students will be involved in the process through self and peer assessment.

Not every student learns the same way or at the same pace. The same learning target can be measured with more than one type of activity. There will be times when students will have some choice in how they show what they know and can do. Other times, they will have to complete required formats, even if this requires them to stretch out of their comfort zone, because it moves them into their zone of proximal learning.

Broad Course Content/Units

This course will include (but not be limited to) the following content:

Composition – Students will study various writing techniques and essay genres such as exposition, narration, reflection, and persuasion. They will inquire into the elements of each technique through essays, debates, discussions, and creative pieces.

Thinking – Students will examine, develop and design effective speaking techniques, and work on performing monologues in class. They will work through inquiry based projects in which they will create personal monologues, collaborate to generate new ideas, and perform their speeches in class.

Communication – Students look at how communication works across different genres.

Personal and Cultural Identity – Students will look at First Peoples’ Oral Traditions and Principles of Learning, and how language builds meaning and forms a part of personal and cultural identities.

Personal and Social Responsibility- Students inquire into diversity, conflict, community, and environment by analyzing critical local or global issues, and creating campaigns to advocate for causes. Students will also reflect deeply on self-determination and wellbeing.

Independent Novel Study – Students choose a novel to examine throughout the semester, and will engage in discussions and debates based on their chosen text. Students will also critique their novels through mini assignments that focus on summaries, themes, character development, and plot.
